

The University of Bedfordshire is continuing to forge relationships with the Kempston Education Trust and it has been closely involved since the inception of KET.

Activities have included mentoring schemes for pupils, working with university students, through the Aim Higher Scheme and short courses about opportunities for students to enter the teaching profession.

As a University and geographically close to the Kempston Education Trust, we see there are numerous developments that will develop over the next few years, particularly if students are interested in Physical activity and sports. The state of the art facilities are going to be used by teams prior to the 2012 Olympics and visits can be arranged to see what is on offer.

With the University being also located in Luton there are further opportunities for the students to visit and experience the facilities that are centred around the faculty of Media and Arts.

The University of Bedfordshire looks forward to developing much greater links with this newly formed Trust at such an exciting and developmental stage in the life of the Trust and this new University.
